Make room for a good question.

Separate catalogue statements, things you can directly see and questions that need further expertise.

THE RESULT YOU ARE WORKING TOWARD

A checkable observation card for one catalogue record, with no invented translation or provenance.

Who this serves

Adult learners, teens 13+ and history-study facilitators

Use it at your own pace. Read one module, try the scenario, then use the fieldwork page in your own setting. Writing, speaking and personal disclosure are optional. Keep your notes private unless you choose to share them.

What this work is

Original CrownThrive editorial guidance and reusable worksheets, produced with AI assistance. It is not Scripture, an Ethiopian Bible translation, an official denominational publication or a claim of pastoral authority. Scripture references point you to your own permitted edition; no third-party Bible text or manuscript image is reproduced.

MY QUESTION OR PURPOSE FOR THIS JOURNEY

Identify one physical witness

Open the British Library's Or 519 record. Write the institution, shelfmark, record URL and access date. A shelfmark identifies a particular catalogued object. A familiar work title alone does not identify every copy or edition. Record the language and date range as catalogue information. If the image viewer is unavailable, continue with the catalogue and state that you did not inspect the images.

EXAMPLE

Record: British Library; Or 519; Four Gospels; catalogue gives Ge'ez and a 17th-century date range. Evidence type: catalogue statement. Image inspection: not yet completed.

Save the catalogue link and a short written description. Do not redistribute an image without checking item-level reuse conditions.

INSTITUTION AND SHELFMARK

CATALOGUE URL AND DATE

WHAT I HAVE ACTUALLY ACCESSED

Make three evidence columns

Use three columns: 'The catalogue states', 'I can directly see', and 'I wonder'. Only describe visible features in the second column. If you cannot read the language, you can still describe layout, lines, margins or decoration without claiming a translation. An inference belongs in the third column until evidence supports it. Your uncertainty is part of a useful record.

EXAMPLE

Catalogue: parchment codex. Observation, only if images load: a page is arranged in two text columns. Question: what reading or copying practices shaped this layout? Do not turn the question into an answer based on appearance alone.

Make three observations you could show another person. Keep any interpretation in a separate sentence.

THE CATALOGUE STATES

I CAN DIRECTLY SEE

I WONDER / NEED TO VERIFY

Share the record respectfully

Write a caption that names the institution and shelfmark, states the evidence type and links back to the record. A teaching caption can describe what you studied without including an image. Manuscripts can remain religiously meaningful to living communities. Avoid treating a sacred object as a novelty, claiming a modern image is an ancient original or implying the catalogue endorses your interpretation.

EXAMPLE

A useful text-only caption: 'Learning to read a catalogue: British Library Or 519, a Ge'ez Four Gospels manuscript described in the institution's record. My notes distinguish catalogue data from my own questions.'

Ask a peer to follow your link and identify which parts of your note are sourced and which are your questions.

A QUESTION FOR A KNOWLEDGEABLE READER

Keep the source beside the study.

The guidance, scenarios, examples and worksheets are original editorial work. Source notes below identify the limited factual or reading basis. Source access does not grant reproduction rights. No third-party translation, archival quotation or manuscript image is included.

Or 519 - British Library manuscript catalogue

The catalogue describes a Ge'ez Four Gospels manuscript dated to the 17th century. A catalogue description and a direct observation are different evidence types.
